

'Church done differently'

Evening services but not as we know them!

What A chance to experiment with different styles of service

When The evening of the third Sunday of each month

Why So we can better identify possible ways forward for the future

A desire has been expressed in the church that we think about how we might 'do church differently.' As a result, every third Sunday of the month we are going to try-out different styles of service to see how they work, how they are received and whether we think they might be appropriate for future use.

We are hoping that the lessons learnt from these experimental evenings will help to clarify and focus our future thinking about how we might best meet the needs of our ever changing culture. Some of these evenings will be geared at our current church congregation, some at people who are interested in Christianity/church but perhaps don't fully engage with it and some at people who have no church background or knowledge of the Christian faith.

In the long term it may well be that we decide to do something at a different time or in a different place. These 'church done differently' events are simply our initial experimentation. Some of the evenings might be roaring successes, others might not work as well – but that is OK as we will learn from both experiences.

We do hope that as many of you will get involved as possible by coming along and providing feedback about what you think you think works and what you think is needed to better serve our community.

So watch this space and please do get involved in the journey!
