Would you like to discover your talents, skills and career drivers and find out what kind of work you are called to?

This one-day workshop provides you with an opportunity to look at finding the right balance between planning your career and responding to God's calling. Beginning with some thoughts on the theology of work, we will, through a blend of presentation, discussions and workshop exercises attempt to give you a better understanding of your unique blend of skills and abilities, and some insights into the way these might be applied to God's work in the world. The workshop will also provide tools for helping you to identify and encourage gifts in others in your church or community.

The inter-active style of delivery will involve a range of media and a blend of presentations, exercises, storytelling, discussion and personal reflection.

The workshop will be led by John Lees, career transition coach and best-selling author of several careers titles, a regular contributor to the national press and broadcast media and Shirley Jenner of LICC Manchester who works as Senior Lecturer in HRM and Organisational Behaviour at MMU Business School with a keen interest in graduate and professional careers, vocational guidance and Christian mentoring. This event is being run in partnership with Lymm Baptist Church.

Who will benefit from this workshop?

This day event is for anyone wishing to review the career choices they have made or who are actively considering a change of direction in the work they do. The workshop will be particularly useful for those seeking to explore the relationship between career planning and a Christian sense of calling or vocation, either for themselves or in order to provide pastoral care and support for others.

Advance Booking is essential because places are limited. No bookings can be accepted after midday on Tuesday 20th November 2007. Please book early.
